FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

The purpose of a yearbook is to set down upon its pages a reflection of the incidents that happened during a year, so that that particular year may always remain fresh in the memory of the students who made it memorable. We have tried to do this to the best of our ability in this year's book. We pass it on to you, as your book, with the hope that it will mean as much to you as it does to us.

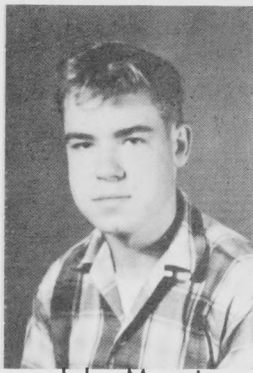

I would like to thank my faithful, hard-working staff, who always listened so attentively to my instructions, and did the right thing anyway. Also, a note of appreciation to our wise and thoughtful staff advisors, our long-suffering publisher, and all the others who did their bit in putting the book together; but especially to you, the students, to whom the book belongs, and without whom it could not exist.

This year has been an exciting and successful one for us at Western. We have made an impressive contribution to our community not only on the sport field but more particularly in the classroom. I would like to extend a sincere gesture of thanks to the administration, the teachers, the staff, and to you, the students for your kind and generous co-operation and help throughout the past year.

To those who know Western, it stands proudly in our minds with a two-fold purpose. Firstly, it is a monument to those who attended Western and taken advantage of the educational opportunities offered them so freely. Secondly, it is a key to enquiring minds, to people who wish to play a prominent role in the future of our nation.

As 1960 marks the dawn of a new decade, challenging vistas appear before us. Here we are at the crucial intersection of life; straight ahead begins a narrow path, cluttered with obstacles, at whose end stand our goals. These are reached only after hard and diligent work, but they reap lasting and priceless rewards. Branching off along the pathway are short, broad trails which lead to enticing but temporary honours. As Western's doors open, the pathway lies before us; with foresight and determination, we shall surmount these obstacles and attain our goals.

Late in the 16th Century, John Donne expressed in memorable prose the requirement that each person should identify himself with his fellows. "No man", he writes, "is an island entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main." True words indeed. But today, centuries later in a changed world, Donne might find that man is in danger of becoming too greatly influenced, too strongly dominated by his fellow man and he is in danger of losing the precious qualities of thoughtfulness, insight and independence that can be derived from an insular existence.

As students, many of you must have felt a rigidity in a school system that compelled you to do this, to learn that, to believe the other thing. You may have sensed, too, through brief experiences with the world beyond the school a certain deceptive conformity that is required of all adults. You may have noted that society and custom demand increasingly that you act as others do, that you buy the same cars, play the same games, dress in the same styles, eat, walk, talk and most dangerous of all, think as others do. And why? Because others do these things. Now, if your education through high school has done anything for you, we hope that it has given you a store of information and a desire and eagerness to think independently upon what you have absorbed. You may feel that you know little and have gained less by thought, yet when you compare yourselves with the millions on this earth who have not known a day of school, you are rich indeed. And so in the future, before you become completely engulfed by the pressures of conformity and have become moulded fully into one of the unthinking mass of people, we hope that at intervals you will stop and say, "No. I am, thanks to an all-wise Deity, an individual unlike no other. I have my own feelings, my own thoughts, my own personality, my own life. These are the most precious things I possess. I shall agree, consent and co-operate as a member of society, but I shall retain some of my own individuality lest I become a cipher, one of a million. This I must do because I am a human being."

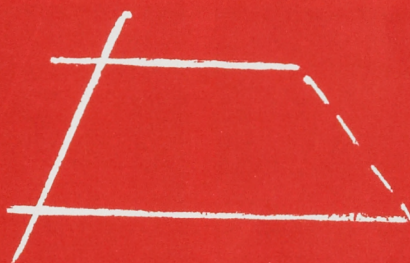

You will never achieve exactly what you hope for, of course, but if you are resistant at times, you will gain self-respect, some independence and a measure of a life that is full and free.

History

A day that will live long in our memories was September 3, 1957, when for the first time we entered Western Canada High School, and looked forward to the many friends we would make while pursuing our learning within its walls.

The bell rang and we all assembled in the auditorium, where our new principal, Mr. Ward Steckle, calmed all our fears and quickly made us feel at home in our new surroundings. It took many weeks to acquaint ourselves with new classrooms, teachers, and the policies laid down by the administration.

Early in November, we attended the Remembrance Day and Awards Day Assembly, and before we knew it the Christmas Season was upon us with its annual festivities.

The two outstanding personalities of the year were Don Watson, President of the Student's Union, and Muriel Fish, Queen of Western.

In spite of a bad epidemic of Asiatic Flu early in the New Year, our athletes were not seriously hampered in their efforts to uphold the name of Western. The Annual Track Meet held late in May marked the climax of the sports events for the 1957-1958 season.

Our second year, 1958-59, began amid great confusion as the buildings were under renovation and the student's parking lot was nearing completion.

Late in the fall, the election campaigns began in which a gallant battle was staged for the five positions on the Executive of the Student's Union. Woody Hand became our new President.

Our second year was a very successful one for the Senior Redmen who won the Provincial Basketball Championship, the Junior, Intermediate, and Senior Girls, who captured the city title, and Margret Withers who became "Miss Western."

The Western Glee Club, under the supervision of Mrs. Dobson, also won much recognition by performing on television and for the Rotary Club.

We launched into our third and final year with much enthusiasm, stimulated by the sight of an attractive new central building. This new addition included many new classrooms, a library, and a larger, more modern office.

To provide an added incentive for higher marks, a new Honor Roll was instituted consisting of two divisions, First Class Honors and Honors.

The Twelfth Annual Athletic Banquet was sponsored by the Student's Union to honor outstanding athletes. Terry White, President, was the Master of Ceremonies. The newly formed Girl's Curling Team, who were the city champs, won the gallon of ice cream for the best display illustrating their club activity.

Our Drama Club, under the capable leadership of Ken Dyba, chose "Ruth Ripley" or "The Orphan's Sacrifice", as their 1960 production. The Easter Exams which were written earlier this year, provided an insight into the coming Departmental Exams in June. Two weeks later, the Queen dance was held at which Bonnie Schiffner topped the polls for Queen. This year the preparations for the graduation took on an added interest for us as we were the graduating class of 1960.

So good-bye Western. We part filled with regret at leaving behind us the happiness and security of our adolescent years, but with anticipation of our next step into the adult world.

TERROR

It was a cold October morning. The sun was just beginning to show over the hill. That night the ring of ice around the pond had widened. Although more of the pond had been covered by this growing border each night, there was still open water. The peace of the night, the only safety left, had ended. Soon the sun would be up and the hunters would be arriving.

Feeding began as normally as was possible, considering the nervous tension of the flock, then the quiet of the morning was shattered by the roar of guns. The flock rose in panic-stricken flight, leaving behind three fatally wounded members.

After several miles of flight, searching for a safe resting place, the flock landed in the quiet cove of a lake. But even there, there was no peace. At the slightest sound or movement the whole flock came to frightened attention, ready for instant take-off. Then it came again, the dreaded roar of gunfire. As before, the flock rose in blind, panic-stricken flight, but this time all but four were left behind.

These four headed out over the lake, and then swung south. When they passed the far end of the lake, they saw another flock of ducks. As they landed they noticed the unnatural stillness of the new flock. Suddenly there was the sound of gun-fire. Then there was silence.

—JACQUELYN TAYLOR 10E

BOREDOM

Gazing disinterestedly
At
One spot
On the ceiling;
Picking stray thoughts
From
A mind
Of indifference;
Drawing aimless circles
On
A piece
Of used paper;
Licking the floor
With
The toe
Of my Shoe;
Watching the birds
Wing by Outside.
The bell rings,
I grab my books
And dash
Down the hall
For my next class.

—DAGMAR KELLER 11F

SCHOOL DAYS

A tear, a sigh, a wave good-bye
 To crushes, hushes, and hidden secrets,
 We are leaving.
 You that remain will have
 Jokes, cokes,
 And romances
 That spring from dances.
 Scenes, jeans,
 Books and nooks
 Jumping and jumbled
 Together in a maze.
 What is this,
 A craze?
 No, simply
 School days
 To which we bid farewell.

—MARY-HELEN FERRIS 12H

DUE TUESDAY

I am about to be inspired! Inspiration is a very painful process — something like Physical Education or having your leg wrenched from your body. So to make myself more susceptible to the disease, I turn the lights down, put some gentle music on the record player and sit. Ten minutes later I'm still sitting but thoroughly enjoying Beethoven. Suddenly, as a bolt out of the grey, comes inspiration's sledge-hammer blow! It strikes me so violently that I feel it necessary to replenish my fatigued body and mind with a little sustenance.

A sufficient amount of food later, I once again make my way up to my intellectual hovel to record my idea. However, over-indulgence has a tendency (grudgingly admitted) to mesmerize the mind; and I find my dearest inspiration has flitted away. I begin to exercise my cortex, but to no avail! I trip lightly into the vortex of deepest anxiety and woe, because this assignment is due Tuesday.

The fact that I have completed this assignment without inspiration is a tribute to my advisor with the little pitchfork. Now as I wend my merry way kitchen-ward, I wish to point out that inspiration takes devious forms.

RABBIT STEW - - NEXT TIME

Why did I ever go rabbit hunting on a day like this? For four hours I had been wandering up and down, through bush, over fields, in and out, walking, walking, walking. Despair crept in as I felt a nagging certainty that any rabbit that had been in the area vacated before I arrived. As I slogged across a field with the knife-edged wind slashing at my already cold face, a grass clump about ten yards in front of me suddenly shift position. An island of hope began to rise from a stormy sea of despair, but because of the drifting snow, I could ascertain nothing. Cautiously, I edged closer. Were those . . . ? No. It looks like . . . Frantically trying to focus my vision, I crept still nearer. Ears formed, and the vague outline of a head appeared. Slowly, slowly, I raised my bow and squinted down the arrow at the still form of my prey. I blinked, and the vague form of the victim disintegrated onto the surrounding greyish-white of the snow. Concentrating, I distinguished the rabbit, and loosed the arrow. A flash of blue feather, the twang of the string and the jerk of the bow told me the arrow was speeding on its way. Flashing through the brittle, brown grass the arrow hit with a thud. I ran up to see my still quivering arrow sticking in — a pile of dirt covered with snow. With fuming disgust, I realized that my rabbit had existed only in my rather optimistic imagination. Inwardly raging, I picked up the arrow and trudged onwards.

—Jim Farmilo 10E

THE RODENTS

Ron and I were on a winter hike. Our camp was situated in a grove of tall, stately spruce trees with interlocking branches which formed a natural highway for the numerous squirrels in the area. Chattering constantly above our heads, the squirrels warned everything of our presence.

The squirrels, although noisy, were very wary — and for good reason! Ron had brought along his bow in hopes of getting a rabbit or a grouse. Squirrels, however, being the only game except for a few chickadees, were the obvious objects of our attention. A bow is harder to shoot than a rifle, but even so, the chances of hitting a rabbit are reasonably good, if you aren't too far away. But a squirrel! If you have ever tried to hit a target the size of your hand with a bow at a distance of over fifteen feet, you'll know what it was like. Nevertheless, we tried.

Tried is right! Our first encounter occurred when one squirrel came up to within eight feet of us. Ron dashed into the tent and attempted to string up his bow. Much to our disgust, the bow was on the squirrel's side. While Ron and the bow struggled inside the tent, the squirrel decided that he had appraised us to his satisfaction and left. I could have sworn the thing sneered at us, turned his back, stuck his nose in the air and casually sauntered away. Ron burst out of the tent with his bow ready, but it was too late. Enough was enough, and our anger was aroused! Now, look out, squirrels!

"Are squirrels rodents?" Ron queried.

"Yes," I replied. "I think so."

"Aren't rodents pests?"

"Well," I ventured, trying to think of a good answer, "I think . . . er . . . at least most . . ."

"They are!" finished Ron.

"Could be."

"They are," he repeated, "and it is our duty to exterminate pests. Right?"

"Right!"

So the squirrels were doomed. We had decided to exterminate them; and therefore they hadn't a chance. We would kill them all.

But the squirrels didn't co-operate. They merrily flew across their many highways and laughed at us — fifteen feet above our heads.

One shot hit a tree and ricocheted, with the result that we lost it. Another arrow bounced into a field of snow a foot deep. We lost it, too. One squirrel was knocked out of a tree by a blunt arrow. Another one was given a crewcut by a razorhead, but scampered off unhurt.

A day and a half later we went home: unhappy, tired, minus two arrows — and squirrelless.

—JIM FARMILLO 10E

FRIENDSHIP

A friend is someone who indeed,
Is always there in time of need.
When you're down and out, poor soul
He'll help you rise to meet your goal.
He sighs for you when you are sad,
Shares your joys when you are glad.
He's by your side through thick and thin
To lead you on and help you win.
He's glad to see you, and to share
The fun and sorrow which you bear.
And when he feels, of success he has none,
You'll help him out as he has done.

—KATHY WILLIAMSON 11H

THE FAMILY

The family is like a book —
The children are the leaves;
The parents are the covers
That protecting beauty gives.
At first the pages of the book
Are blank and purely fair;
But Time soon writeth memories
And painteth pictures there.
Love is the little golden clasp
That bendeth up the burst;
Oh! break it not lest all the leaves
Should scatter and be lost.

—CAROLYN SPEAR 11H

BETWIXT'

Bell-jingling sleighs course through the night,
Horses' hoofs thumping in rhythm is might;

Buffalo robes tucked up under each chin
Make sure that Jack Frost won't nip at the skin;

The squeek of the runners on new fallen snow
Reminds us the thermometer reads fifteen below.

Such fun, such laughter and wild abandon
Will ne'er be equalled by generations now standin'.

For now with our cars and new fangled devices
Good fun is all weighed in money and prices.

—WENDY PITCHER 10E

DISCOVERIES

Out there in the space unknown
Mighty clouds do fly;
The twilight is a mysterious dome.
Day is passing by.

Queerest music rings the ears.
Eerie, whistling wind
Bends the trees to scrape the sky's
Deepened purple tint.

In the distance glows the moon.
Small clouds drifting by
Let the rays come filt'ring through
Like ladders climbing high.

Angels stepping graciously —
On them glory shines;
Breezes sweep their long, soft hair
Rustling through the lines.

As we look at all these things
We think of God on high,
And His great love for all of us.
We know that He is nigh.

—SHARON HOLMES 10K

A SKI RUN

Dawn had just appeared as we reached the outskirts of town on that crisp December holiday morning. At last we were on our long awaited ski trip to the Rockies.

Quietly we assembled at the foot of the first hill and prepared to start. Our skis snapped on with a loud "click" as the safety harness slipped into place. The early morning silence seemed to creep into us since the only sounds that could be heard were the slipping sound of skis on the crisp snow and then the dull thump of skis and the click of ski poles as we "herringboned" to the first summit.

Reaching the crest, we turned to greet an awe-inspiring sight. The golden rays of the rising sun left some of its dazzling colour on the sleeping city. The tall buildings in the distance had taken on a fairy-land effect, each pane of glass reflecting the brilliant gold of the sun. Smoke from the myriad surrounding homes curled lazily into the clearing sky forming a haze over the city. Almost reluctantly we turned in a state of awe to continue our journey.

Now we were on our way. The first ten miles went normally. During this two-hour period we climbed and traversed over the tedious slopes until we were clear of these obstacles.

After that, the first day's journey was sheer pleasure. The foothill slopes become longer and more rolling, making the skiing more interesting. A gray sky crept over and it began to snow lightly. I paused momentarily on the crest of a steep long hill while my companions swept past. The line of skiers swerved down the hillside each duplicating his predecessor's pattern in follow-the-line-leader style. They moved along, leaving a ribbon-like trail in the new white blanket of snow. Finally they glided lightly to rest on the valley floor; and then they skirted the low brush bordering the snow-covered creek. I stayed only to watch them start climbing the other hill leaving an intricate herringbone pattern behind. I sped to catch up.

Nothing can take the place of trips like that, as far as sport, beauty, and fun are concerned. The line of skiers gliding down the slope, twisting, turning, traversing, leaving a pattern in new snow, is a breath-taking sight. The sheer joy of racing down the velvet slope with powdered snow flying in your eyes is an inexpressible feeling.

Coming to the summit of a particularly high foothill, we met the majestic Rockies face to face. The massive grey-blue peaks peered at us through the grey gloom from the distance. At this point we made camp for the night to prepare to meet the challenge of the Rockies in the morning.

TO THE WORLD AND ME

The sun is sitting on top of a tree
Bidding goodnight to the world and me.
Slowly, she glides down the branches, now
To her glorious splendour I humbly bow,
For she reaches out with golden arms
To still my soul with her soothing charms.
The floating clouds of scarlet hue
Fade away and pass from view.
As I sit here and watch her go
I'm very sure that she must know
I wouldn't trade this life I live
For all the riches the world could give.
I love the wild woods, the gentle sky,
The horses, the dogs, the birds that fly,
The flowers, the bees, the grass and trees.
So many more, not only these.
I'm glad that I am able the beauty to see,
The beauty God gave to the world and me.

Mud in your eye

Finishing touch.

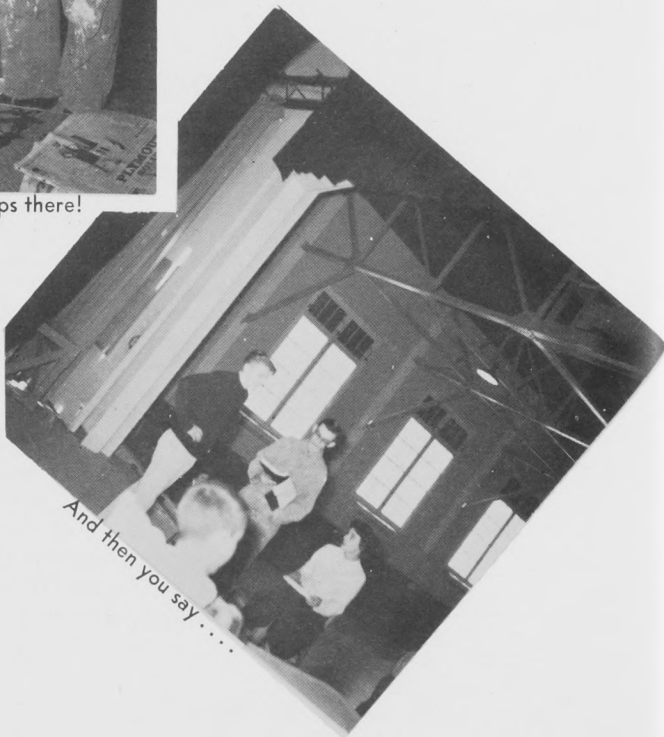

Washday blues.

... oooooops there!

A little dab will do ya

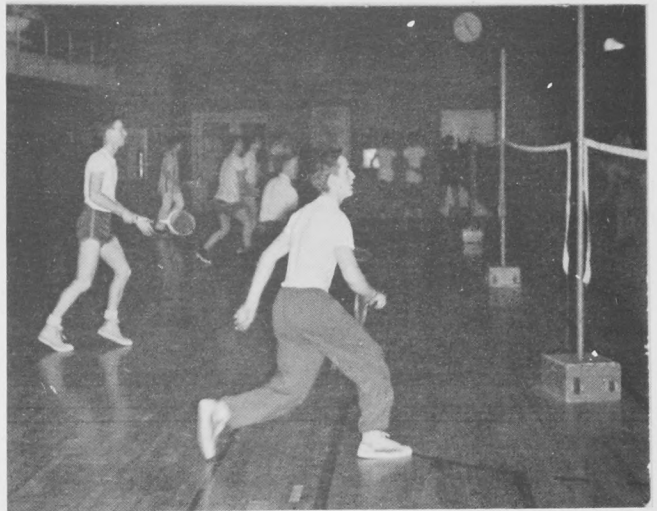

And then you say ....

Good sportsmanship

The hard workers.

16 heads — 32 eyes

Oh those blue jeans!!

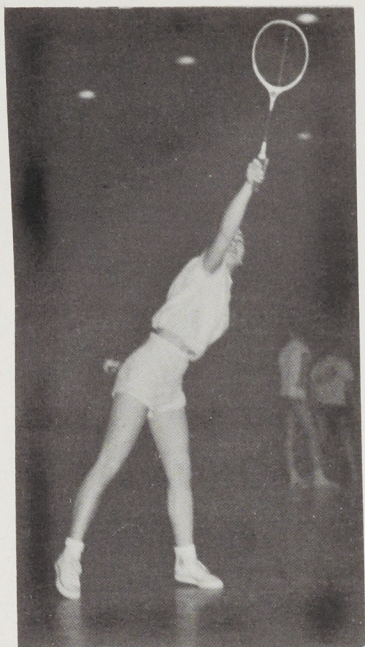

Two points more

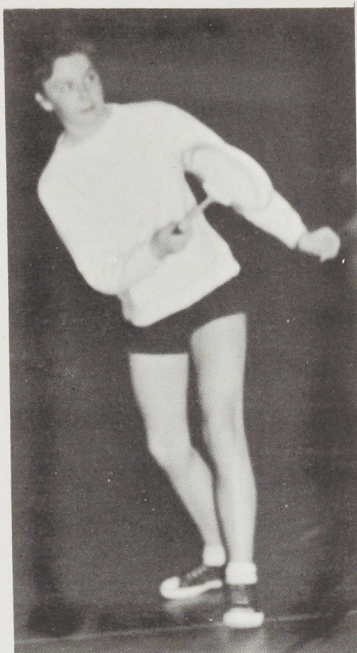

Your turn.

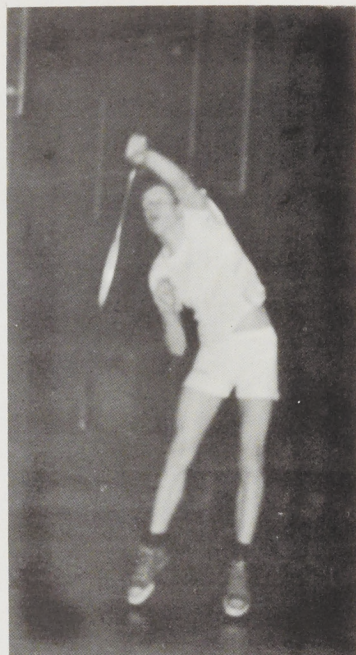

Stretch much? ?

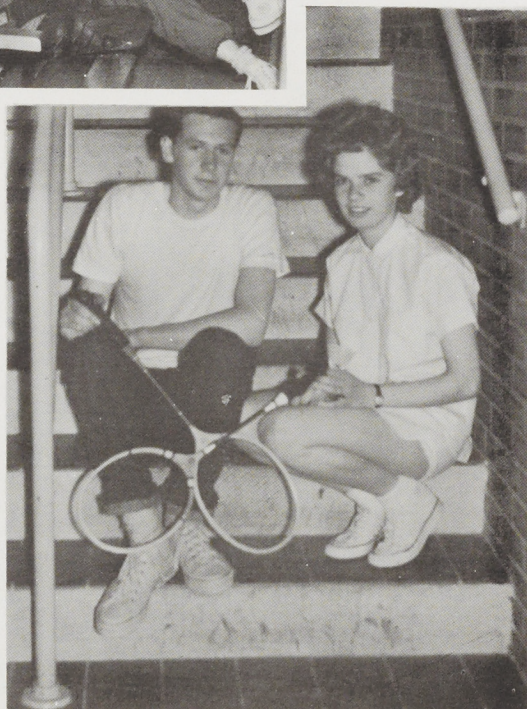

Ya ready...

Backwards also! !

Ready, willing, able? ?

THE WESTERN MIRROR 1959-60

The official student paper of Western Canada High School, the Western Mirror, successfully opened the school year of 1959-60 with a record sales volume of 1334 copies.

Highlights of the year's issues were messages from world-famous celebrities; the first issue contained a letter from Prime Minister John Diefenbaker; the February issue featured an autographed photograph of Princess Grace of Monaco; and the March 4 issue spotlighted an exact replica of a page from the world's first signed and dated book received from the Gutenberg Museum in Germany.

Other features of the year's papers included an especially colorful front page for the Christmas issue, a new and highly praised column The Mirror Reflects which provided a nostalgic glimpse through past Mirrors, and special literary pages which honoured worthy talent.

The staff advisers were Mrs. Margaret Arnold and Mr. L. N. Elliott; Russell Rae and Malcolm Schofield, as business managers deserve congratulations for keeping The Mirror well in the black.

All told six issues were distributed and each paper served as an accurate history of Western Canada High School, 1959-1960.
